The Sections Table

Here is an example sections table for a course. It shows a few options you might see:

6. Section 006: Enrollment is not allowed for this learner.

No Enrollment Option for a section

If you are viewing a course, and there isn't an enroll button for a section, there are a few possibilities that could be true:

- If a section of a course does not allow self-enrollment, but is displayed in the catalog, there won't be an option to enroll.
- Sections can be configured with a maximum enrollment and whether it allows learners to add themselves to a waitlist. If a course has met its maximum enrollment, and the enroll button is available, the learner will be added to the waitlist. If a section does not allow a waitlist, and the course is at maximum enrollment, there will not be an enrollment button.
- Courses can require a prerequisite. If a course has a prerequisite, and you have not met it, there will not be an enrollment button.

Completing course components

The items in the required component(s) section must be completed in order to complete the course. The component will display the status, and how completion is recorded:

Completing Components

A course can have 3 or 4 completion methods, depending on the delivery method. Every delivery method has the completion methods of:

- Completion Not Required

Note: this can be an additional completion method, but it can never be the only completion method.

For courses that have components delivered via Canvas, there is a fourth possibility: Canvas marks completion.

Completion Requirements

- If a course component displays Your Instructor will mark your completion, then the instructor will update your transcript when the requirements are met.
- A course component might display a Mark Complete button . This is a Learner Marks Complete component. When you have completed the item, click the button to show you have completed it.

- If a course component displays Note: There is no completion for this course, then it is optional, and it does not need to be marked complete to have the course completed.
- If a course component displays Note: You must complete the component in Canvas, then you will need to complete the entire Canvas course.
